THE OLD SEA FORTRESS OF MAZAGAN

FORGOTTEN STORIES OF THE PORTUGUESE EMPIRE.

[BY A CORRESPONDENT IN THE "CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR.]

For nearly three hundred years
the Portuguese were lords of Ma-zagan. Those were the days when Portugal dreamed of a mighty empire—when her flag, emblazoned
with the Royal Arms of Portugal, flew from most of the castles and battlements of the Moroccan seaboard. All down the coast one sees them—these immense sea fortresses,
at Mazagan, at Magador, at Agadir; and the fact that they remain intact and impregnable to this day says much for the work done in the fifteenth century.

The harbour of Mazagan lies against the walls of the old town;
and, as we sailed in, the city piled itself up above us. The high Portuguese tower stood black against the starlit sky, with the still older Moorish watch tower
just behind it, and round about them crowded the palaces, houses,
and fortresses of the ancient city,
all inclosed in the immense walls and bastions. It was like the drop scene of a theatre, and we all agreed it must have been a perfect background for the great Portuguese galleons, sweeping in with strange pictures billowing out on their painted sails, hundreds of years ago! But that glory has vanished, and nothing comes into Mazagan harbour now but a few fishing craft, one or two coasting steamers, and an occasional yacht.
I cannot think why more yachts do not go down the Moroccan coast;
the sailing is excellent and the anchorage good in all the old ports.
Mazagan is particularly favoured,
for besides its excellent harbour it has a great circling bay which makes a good anchorage. One wonders why this fine old port was not chosen, instead of Casablanca, as the commercial port of Morocco.
At least, it has left Mazagan a coastline, entirely unspoiled by docks, quays or warehouses. One may walk for a mile and a half along the broad boulevard outside the town, with the huge Atlantic waves breaking at one's feet!

THE OLD TOWN.

It was the old town itself which interested me most, however, and I spent the whole of the next day wandering about it. Such a strange mixture of mankind is here—Jews, Arabs, Frenchmen, Negroes from southern Africa, natives from the Atlas Mountains, Greeks, Levan-
tines, sailors from everywhere.
The buildings were just as varied.
The huge houses are all old Portuguese; strange, tall, white houses that look as though they could barricade themselves for defense at any moment. The old town has really become the Mollah, or Jewish quarter, but a number of Europeans prefer to live there, too,
rather than in the new town outside the walls. The native town is on the far side, toward the "Bled," or Plain, and few of the resident Moors come into the old Portuguese city. Nevertheless, there are many wandering Arabs in the streets—sneaks, chancers, water-carriers, a hillman upon a mule, heavily laden donkeys, camels; and just outside the gates we came across a Moorish storyteller to whom many Moors, seated gravely
on the ground in a circle around him, were listening.

RAMPARTS AND SEA WALL.

But the real glory of Mazagan
are the ramparts, that enormous sea wall with its forts and bastions which surrounds the whole city, not only on the Atlantic side where the ocean had to be kept at bay and sea pirates guarded against, but also on the land side; for the descending hordes of mountain tribes, infuriated sons of Islam, in a frenzy to drive the infidel from their coasts, were as relentless and implacable enemies as were the pirates of the sixteenth century!
So these mighty walls, on which twelve horsemen could ride abreast surround the whole town, and were built to last forever. One must go over them again and again—in the waves breaking at one's feet!

The Biggest Wireless Valve In The World.

A GREAT BRITISH ACHIEVEMENT.
FOUR METRES HIGH—WEIGHS OVER A TON.

Few branches of electrical science have made such rapid progress as that of wireless communication, and in this rapid advance involving the closely inter-related efforts of many of the world's leading scientists, the thermionic valve has played an exceedingly important part.

This apparatus, originally invented in 1901 by Dr. J. A. Fleming, in the form of the two-electrode valve, greatly improved by Dr. Lee De Forest in 1907 by the introduction of the grid or third electrode, and subsequently developed by investigators throughout the world, now forms the heart of every modern system of wireless communication.

Our great broadcasting systems, the trans-Atlantic telephone, the beam stations which form a great chain of communication between the distant parts of the earth, all these have as their basis the discovery and evolution of the thermionic valve.

Yet in spite of these rapid advances the wireless engineer has been gravely restricted in his efforts economically and efficiently to increase the power at his disposal by the fact that the valve in its commercial form has up to the present necessarily been constructed in the form of a highly evacuated glass bulb into which are sealed permanently the electrodes necessary for its operation.

The difficulties of construction and operation of this type of valve increased enormously as greater and greater outputs were required. Cooling, deterioration of the vacuum and the great expense of replacement when the valve failed—all had presented difficult and in some cases insurmountable problems.

For many years the ideal of a valve whose vacuum would not become poorer with age, in which the great difficulty of sealing off the electrodes under vacuum in the process of manufacture would be avoided and in which the filament could be replaced or other repairs executed, and the valve rapidly and easily again placed in operation, has been the object of much investigation.

By the achievement of this ideal it was seen that the valve would become not a thing of ephemeral glory with a restricted life inevitably followed by expensive replacement, but a permanent and lasting piece of engineering equipment.

Continually evacuated valves have previously been operated successfully under laboratory conditions, the vacuum being maintained by means of the mercury vapour pump. This process, however, was rendered commercially impracticable by the fact that the mercury vapour, due to its high vapour pressure, prevented the necessary degree of vacuum from being maintained unless recourse was had to the expensive and unwieldy process of cooling with liquid air.

Herein lies a romantic story of scientific achievement and of a discovery which has been developed by close co-operation between scientist, engineer and artisan, to its practical utilisation in the world's largest wireless valve, an engineering masterpiece which achieves the ideal for which previous investigators have striven—a demountable and continuously evacuated valve in a practical-commercial form.

Accidental Discovery.

The discovery leading to this achievement emanated from the Research Laboratories of the Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company of Great Britain wherein some three years ago experiments in no way connected with wireless communication or thermionic valves, and indeed not expected to be of any industrial consequence, led to the production of oil distillates having remarkable properties.

They could be boiled at a fairly low pressure without decomposition and yet at room temperature their rate of evaporation was so small that they could be placed inside a wireless valve without impairing the vacuum. Such a material has almost as much appeal to the vacuum physicist of to-day as had the philosopher's stone to the early alchemist.

It was quickly realised that here was the ideal liquid to replace the mercury of the vapour pump, as due to its low volatility cooling could now be effected with water and the cumbersome and expensive liquid air process eliminated.

This was a vitally important step removing as it did the continuously evacuated valve from the realm of laboratory apparatus and placing it at the service of the engineer.

In 1929 a valve designed for an input of approximately 20 kw. was constructed, incorporating the new development, and proved so satisfactory in operation, not only in the laboratory, but also in actual continuous service at the Rugby Wireless Station, that the British Post Office which had from the early stages shown a lively and progressive interest in these tests, entrusted the Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company with the design and manufacture of a 500 kw. valve.

Thus, after many months of effort involving careful design, constant experiment, detailed testing and the overcoming of numerous mechanical difficulties—some of the parts, for instance, called for an accuracy in commercial production of the order of .00025 m.m.—an entirely new development conceived less than three years before has been brought to a successful commercial conclusion.

Three Hundred Thousand Billion
Electrons Per Second.

Physically this huge new valve stands 4 metres high and is 30 m.m. in diameter. Complete it weighs over a ton and is built on a welded steel bedplate, 3 metres long by 11 metres wide. Its water-cooled steel anode weighs 163 kg. and is equipped with hydraulic jacks to facilitate demounting and assembly. Its filament current is approximately 500 amperes or several thousand times that of a receiving valve, and its filament emission 100 amperes representing the almost inconceivable electron flow of 300,000,000,000,000 (three hundred thousand billion) electrons per second. It now operates the main transmitter at Rugby, thereby replacing a bank of 50 ordinary high-power valves.

No glass is used in its construction, but a robust combination of steel and porcelain, two of the most common materials utilised in the manufacture of electrical equipment. As a result of the continuous evacuation, and in sharp contrast with valves of the permanently sealed type, this new valve improves with age, any gas evolved during its operation and which in the sealed valve would inevitably impair the vacuum, being rapidly removed by the pumps. Thus an exceedingly high vacuum is maintained even at the highest power inputs. The pumps, with the exception of a simple type of primary extractor, have no moving parts, and mechanical trouble is therefore a very remote possibility.

Completely Demountable.

Finally the valve is completely demountable. In the event of filament or other repairs being necessary, it may be rapidly taken to pieces, the repairs executed with ordinary engineering tools, and the whole re-assembled and placed back into operation in the course of a few hours—truly a remarkable achievement.

These new developments have made possible the manufacture of valves capable of dealing with outputs considerably higher than 500 kw. and demountable continuously evacuated valves of many times this power—in itself several times that of what was previously the world's largest—are in no sense a visionary prospect.

It is fitting that a time when the homage of the scientific world is being paid to the memory of Michael Faraday, who 100 years ago laid the foundation of electrical engineering by his momentous discovery and exposition of the principle of electro-magnetic induction, British inventive genius should add yet another outstanding discovery to its record of achievement.

It would be premature to dilate at any length on its future possibilities. While the new development will be of vast importance primarily in the field of wireless communication, the possibility of handling such large power and of utilising, in the field of power engineering, the diversity of application which characterises the thermionic valve, opens up prospects of momentous future changes in electrical engineering practice.

Just as the giant turbo-alternators of to-day compare with Faraday's early dynamo, so perhaps will this new wireless valve compare with its more philosophical predecessors.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Here are lists of long-wave and short-wave stations which should be picked up by anyone in Hong Kong who has a moderately good set suitable for receiving such signals. Success in picking up these stations also depends very largely upon favourable atmospheric conditions. Readers are invited to add to this list should they succeed in picking up any station not included in either of these lists.

MOVIE NEWS

ON THE SCREEN IN HONG KONG.

Placid intervals in a "gentleman's" life. Owen Moore and Myrna Loy in a scene from the Fox drama, "Hush Money."

"HUSH MONEY."

STORY OF A NEW YORK GANG.

"Hush Money," Fox film which is now showing at the King's Theatre, is about a gang of what might be called high grade racketeers, immaculately clad gentry who frequent the opera, the exclusive night clubs, the fashionable hotels and have, apparently, plenty of money.

Owen Moore is the chief racketeer, debonair and suave, who induces Joan Bennett, a beautiful girl down on her luck, to accept his patronage. Later, she finds, to her dismay, his true calling and she can do nothing except become one of the gang and pose as the wife of Moore who uses her as a bait to become acquainted with wealthy visitors to New York.

Eventually the gang is rounded up and sent for intermittent terms "up the river." Released from prison she determines to go straight and meets Hardie Albright, with whom she falls in love. They are married, she becomes the mother of a boy but the spectre of the past arises in Moore, released from prison, who attempts to black-mail her. At this point the detective enters again into the scene and she straightens out her problem but at a terrible cost as the story reveals.

Joan Bennett does fine work as Janet Gordon and reveals new talent as an emotional actress. Albright is especially good, and fine work is also done by Moore as the blackmailer and Douglas Cosgrove as the detective, Myrna Loy, O. Henry Gordon, Hughie White, George Raft, and child actor, Ronald Cosby. Sidney Lanfield's direction is more than satisfactory.

"FIVE AND TEN."

IRENE RICH HAS CHANCE TO BE WICKED!

"A wicked woman at last!" This was the enthusiastic greeting with which Irene Rich welcomed her role of the pillaging mother in "Five and Ten" Marion Davies' new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle which is coming to the Queen's Theatre to-day.

"For years I have been a trustful but down-trodden wife on the screen always dressed in calicoes, waiting at home while some other woman was enjoying herself with my husband in the bright lights," she said. "Now I am going to have some fun of my own for a change. No more weeping and waiting and drab clothes. I have eight gorgeous costumes to wear and, believe me, there isn't any woman on earth who enjoys a beautiful clothes any more than I."

Miss Rich last played the tragic role of the wife in "Strangers May Kiss," and her assignment to the role in the new Davies picture followed her acclaim in the Shearer film by critics throughout the country.

Robert Z. Leonard directed the popularization of the Fannie Hurst novel in which Miss Davies is starred. Leslie Howard plays opposite the star.

POWERFUL DRAMA.

"BAD GIRL" COMING TO THE KING'S.

Sally Eilers, who plays the title role in "Bad Girl," Fox Film version of Vina Delmar's celebrated novel of mother love, coming to the King's Theatre on Sunday, is a New Yorker by birth as is James Dunn, who plays the young husband in this gripping story of a typical New York couple.

As a girl, Miss Eilers attended the Horace Mann school in New York but finished her education at Fairfax High School, Hollywood, her family having moved there in 1926.

Having matured in the cinema capital, with numerous friends engaged in the film industry, it was only natural that Sally should turn from thoughts of a secretarial career to the more colourful and romantic one of screen acting.

Her big chance came one day when she visited the Mack Sennett Studio with Carole Lombard. At luncheon she attracted the attention of Sennett who was seeking a girl to take the place of Alice Day who had walked out on him following an argument over Miss Day wearing men's pants in the picture.

Sally agreed to wear the pants and the public agreed that she was a bit in "The Goodbye Kiss." Through increasingly important roles in comedies, she advanced in such pictures as "Dry Martin," "Trail Marriage," "Broadway Daddies," "Show of Shows," "The Long, Long Trail," "Doughboys," and "She Couldn't Say No." She was chosen as a Wampas Baby Star in 1928, an event which she considers equal in importance to her first role as a definite step in her career.

Another is that of her marriage in June of 1930 to Hoot Gibson, which followed prominent work with Buster Keaton in "Sailor's Holiday," and Marie Dressler in "Reducing." Then came another with Keaton, "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," and one with Norma Shearer in "Let Us Be Gay."

HOW "EAST OF BORNEO" WAS FILMED.

FAR EAST TROPICS
SEARCHED FOR SCENES

Thirty thousand miles for atmosphere.

Nothing better illustrates the care and expense involved in the making of a motion picture than the recent trip by a "sound unit" from Universal studios to film scenes for "East of Borneo," the Far Eastern drama which is showing at the Central Theatre to-day.

Starting from Hollywood the company steamed across the Pacific to Singapore, where a yacht had been chartered for them. In this vessel they thoroughly covered the Far Eastern countries, visiting Sumatra, the Straits Settlements, Borneo, and the Malay Peninsula. Many of the scenes were obtained far in the interior of the Malay country, the company journeying for more than 400 miles up the Rian River in the Malay State of Penang.

As a result of the trip, extending over six months, many unusual scenes were secured for the picture, which has been hailed as an outstanding example of technical perfection in a motion picture.

DOROTHY BURGESS
AN IDEAL "LASCA."

LOVELY BRUNETTE IN CENTRAL THEATRE FILM.

Dorothy Burgess, dark, seductive and talented is the girl chosen by Carl Lummale, Jr., to play "Lasca," the fiery Mexican dancehall senorita of a famous poem, to the screen.

The motion picture version, "Ladies of the Rio Grande," is the next attraction at the Central Theatre, and has Leo Carrillo, John Mack Brown, Slim Summerville and Frank Campani in its cast in addition to the beautiful Miss Burgess.

A recruit from stock companies and the stage, the brilliant actress has passed her many sisters of the footlights who stormed the talking screen in vain.

After a startling success opposite Warner Baxter in "In Old Arizona," she retraced her steps to the stage to be starred in "White Cargo" and "The Bird of Flame." Then came the "Lasca" call, and the producers now have her marked for stardom and an "uninterrupted" screen career, if they have their various ways about it.

A long while—certainly since "The Man in Dress Clothes"—and something that no other English actor could do. His little scenes with Miss Marion Lorne—herself as her very best—are masterpieces of half-humorous, wholly sincere, expression.

There was a great reception at the finish to which both Miss Lorne and Mr. Hicks responded. He gave us good news of Miss Ellaline Terriss just in his own way. "The mistress's last words were," he said, "If you get a chance, give the audience my best love."

RECENT BRITISH PICTURES.

CRIME, SPORT, FARCE AND
THE COUNTRYSIDE.

A number of successful United Kingdom pictures have recently been shown including the following:—

"Splinters in the Navy" is a broad comedy with music and songs, the length is 8,020 feet and the leading comedian is Sidney Howard.

"Men Like These" depicts a disaster in a submarine and is a realistic picture of the survivors' fight for life on the sea bed. The length is 4,200 feet and the feature players are John Baskin and Sidney Seward.

"Dr. Jekyll, K.C." is a broad farce in 6 reels, featuring Ernie Cossingham.

"Rynox" features a well-known actor of the silent British screen—Stewart Rome—with whom appear Dorothy Boyd and John Longdon. This is a mystery play of modern life with a length of 4,273 feet.

"Out of the Blue" is a comedy with music adapted from "Little Tommy Tucker," featuring Gene Gerrard and Jessie Matthews; the length is 7,562 feet.

ENGLAND'S COUNTRYSIDE.
"The Great Gny Road" features Stewart Rome, Frank Stanmore and Pat Paterson, and is a story of tramp life with the action including life on the open road, scenes at a village fair and domestic settings. The length is 5,005 feet.

"Jealousy" is a drama adapted from the play "The Green Eye," featuring Malcolm Keen, with a length of 7,187 feet.

"Glimmer" is a dramatic subject featuring Seymour Hicks, Margot Graham and Ellaline Terriss; the length is 5,421 feet.

"Chin Chin Chinaman" is described as a light character drama featuring Leon M. Lion and Ethel Allen, and has a length of 4,339 feet.

"The Shadow Between" features Godfrey Tearle, Kathleen O'Rogan and Olga Lindo, and is announced as a drama of emotional appeal of 7,935 feet.

"Deadlock" features Stewart Rome, Majorie Hume and Warwick Ward, and is a crime story of 7,602 feet.

A FOOTBALL FILM.
"Up for the Cup" is a football picture featuring Sidney Howard, and is 3,870 feet long; it contains some typical British humour.

"Hindle Wakes" is a talking adaptation of the play of that name dealing with Lancashire life. The featured players include John Stuart, Sybil Thorndike and Norman McKinnel, the length is 7,008 feet.

NEW SEYMOUR
HICKS ROLE.

AS D'ARTAGNAN OF TO-DAY.

CLEVER LONDON COMEDY BY WALTER HACKETT.

"THE GAY ADVENTURE." By Walter Hackett, Whitehall Theatre London.

A brilliant and delightful play was Mr. Walter Hackett's "Lasca" mas present to the Whitehall Theatre London.

The idea is a peculiarly happy one. It is that four modern men should meet at a restaurant to celebrate the fact that they are the descendants of Dumas' "Three Musketeers"—with, of course, D'Artagnan's representative—and that they should go out into a modern "unfamiliar street" and find adventure still waiting for them.

Mr. Hackett is so conscientious that, after introducing us to Darn-ton (Mr. Seymour Hicks), Arnan (Mr. Eric Maturing), Porter (Mr. Richard Gray) and d'Allary (Mr. Charles Quintermaine), he switches back to episodes in costume showing us Mr. Hicks as a kind of burlesque D'Artagnan making love to Miss Marion Lorne as Constance. All this—if we are to have it at all—needs a deal of speeding up.

Sympathetic Irony.

Afterwards, however, we come to an altogether happy development Darn-ton finds himself mixed up with a murder in the suite above, in which d'Allary's wife (Miss Nora Swinburne) is implicated, not to mention Miss Marion Lorne as her wholly innocent friend. Fired with the wish to emulate his ancestor, he climbs in at the window of d'Allary's house, knocks down a police-inspector, and goes back to the restaurant to find a less brazened in the end the whole thing proves to be a spoof, and the meeting of the descendants a ruse on the part of a couple of crooks.

Perhaps it is the sense of this possibility all through that helps to give to Mr. Seymour Hicks' performance as the naturally timid, and wholly unromantic but yet earnest modern D'Artagnan, an exquisite flavour of sympathetic irony. In its best moments it is finer than anything he has done for (Continued on Previous Column.)

PASTOR DROPS DEAD
IN PULPIT.

DEFIED PARENTS AND BECAME CHRISTIAN.

KLANG, January 10.—The Rev. S.
W. Arumugam, the Tamil pastor at the Klang Methodist Church, collapsed and died of heart failure in the pulpit while leading prayer this morning.

The funeral will take place at 4.30
this afternoon.
The Rev. S. W. Arumugam was born in Jaffna, Ceylon, about sixty years ago. Despite his parents' opposition he became a Christian and went to Klang about 20 years ago
where he joined the firm of United Engineers.

In his spare time he preached on the estates and at the time of his death visited about 60 estates.
In 1921 Mr. Arumugam left United Engineers and was ordained.
Last year he visited Ceylon and,
after a lengthy preaching tour, returned to Malaya. His health was never too good and it failed to improve.

Mr. Arumugam leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters. One son is at the Theological College, Simla, and the other is a teacher at the Klang Anglo-Chinese School.

A short memorial service was held at the Wesley Church, Singapore,
this morning, conducted by Bishop Lee. The Rev. S. S. Pakianathan paid tribute to Mr. Arumugam's good work for the church.

MADRID, Jan. 20.
Spain is considering the proposal of building fifty tankers for the

In announcing this the Minister of Marine, Señor Gual, declared that if the proposal is accepted the solved immediately.

It will be recalled that Spain was not represented at the International Conference at Copenhagen
which decided against the construction of the projected ships.

FRANCE'S GIANT LINER

NO FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE
FROM GOVERNMENT

PARIS, Jan. 19.
The Finance Commission to the Senate has rejected the Government's plan for financial assistance to the Compagnie Generale Trans-atlantique, in connection with the building of the super-lin de France.

The Commission decided that apart from purely temporary financial arrangements, the only measure
it could support would be the establishment of a new organisation
within the framework of the general policy of development of the mercantile marine.

Such a project could not be drawn up until the Company has been put upon a sound financial basis.

A questionnaire on the issues is being submitted to the Cabinet.

AND NORMA SHEARER'S
OPINION OF LOVE

Love is essential to life—which it is why it is essential to drama.
For drama, to be true, must be life.
So says Norma Shearer, star of "A Free Soul," which will come
on Sunday to the Queen's Theatre.
The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star plays a woman seeking "freedom"
in the new pictures and finds that it leads only to disaster. The story tells of a girl who tries to love two men at once—without success.

Composite of Emotions.

"I mean real love—not sham affection," explains Miss Shearer, outlining just what happened in the picture. "I think love is a composite of many emotions." Many think of love as having two entities
"first love" as it were, and "second love." That is not true—and it is this fact that forms the foundation of Adela Rogers St. John's story.

Regarding the character she played,
Miss Shearer remarked: "Playing this type of role is stimulating.
Modern woman thinks differently
from the woman of the past, but she can still be man's ideal. I think such roles give one more of a sense of being alive."

An elaborate cast supports the star with Leslie Howard as the millionaire sportsman, Lionel Barry-
more as the lawyer father, Clark Gable as the gambler, James Gleason
as the amusing bodyguard and Lucy Beaumont as the aristocratic grandmother.

PASSWORDS IN RETURN FOR BRIBES.

The two men, Chau Pang and Wong Tok, and the three constables Li Lam, Mak Lu and Wan Pui,
all of whom are charged with having made unlawful exactions from hawkers, were again brought before
Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon, when the evidence of hawkers was taken.
Mr. Somerset Fitzroy, the Public Prosecutor, appeared for the prosecution, while Mr. Horace Le was for the first defendant and Mr.
F. X. D'Almada (Sr.), for the three constables. The second defendant, Wong Tok, was not legally represented.
Evidence to the effect that they had hawked without licences, obtaining freedom from police interference by the payment of sums of money from time to time in return for which they were given a password and numbers, was given by the various hawkers, after which the case was again adjourned.

THE OLD SEA FORTRESS OF MAZAGAN.

morning sunshine—when the sun is setting—but best of all by moonlight, when everything is pure silver cut against the black velvet of dark shadows, and even the old stones come to life.
I was happy that we saw them
for the first time at night, leaving the yacht after dinner, and entering with our guide under that double gate, which splits a wall of immense thickness to the lane
where the sentries stood day and night, and where no one goes now,
for it leads to the bastions and not to the streets of the town.

Ascending gradually, we came first to the forges, where the servants of the Portuguese officers took their masters' horses to be shod. It seemed to me that I could hear the ringing of the metal, the clamping of great hoes on the stone, the chaffing and laughter of the men.

Then along dark lanes, up steep stairs, suddenly coming out on the sea-fronting battlements, looking straight out to the Atlantic.
They are not much changed; these huge bastions and mighty walls.
In the half-light you cannot see that the old guns are tottering on their wooden stands, that some have fallen off, though on others
the black muzzles still point
through the embrasures at an imaginary enemy.

THE FORTRESSES.

A great silence is over all; no
soldiers in the guardrooms; no sentinals in the watch towers; just our own shadows for company as we went up and down the battlements,
the echo of our feet on the old flagged stones the only sound. Very silently we went round, past one great bastion after another. They have such lovely names, these tur-retted fortresses which punctuate
the walls at regular intervals: the Bastion of the Generals, the Bastion of the Storks, the Bastion of St. Anthony and St. Sebastian, the Bastion of the Angels. One of them stood the fiercest attacks of the great siege four hundred years ago; the Bastion of the Angel is now a powder magazine; the others are deserted. You can look down over the outer walls and see the old port into which the galleons
came in ancient days, but the sea gate at the end of this port is now filled in and it is no more used.
Some day the inflowing tide will fill it up with sand and pebbles,
the lap-lapping of the water
against the old walls will cease,
and someone will make a garden
here—they have a love for gardens in Mazagan!

And so we came right round the ramparts till we had left the sea
behind us and were on the lan-guard side, over the outskirts of the native town. Here the silence was broken by the haunting refrain of Moorish music, and our guide told us that the Portuguese sentries were warned in olden days not to look over the land wall when the case was again adjourned.

ARMED ROBBERS DISCARD REVOLVER.

WOMAN VICTIM PUTS THEM TO FLIGHT.

At about noon yesterday, two men gained entrance to 401, Queen's Road West, the home of a married woman. One man entered first by pretending that he had been sent by the woman's husband to deliver a basket of fruit. The confederate came in a few minutes later.

The first man, pointing a revolver
at the woman, relieved her of her jewellery worth about $100. Her wrists were tied with wire and a rubber ball inserted in her mouth
as a gag.

While the men were attending to the daughter and the amah, the mistress ran down the stairs, and the gag falling out on the way, she raised the alarm. The robbers, however, ran past and escaped into the street.

The police later picked up a revolver discarded by the men during their flight.

The building contains three large

LONG FIRM FRAUD ALLEGED.

SIX CHINESE ON SERIOUS CHARGES.

Before Mr. W. Schofield at Central Magistracy yesterday, six Chinese, with others unknown, were charged with conspiring to defraud. For: To, Mok Wai Ting, Kwun Sau Chuen, Cheung Kam, Ng Win Tung and Chan Sau, between November 23, 1931 and January 5, 1932, by purchasing certain goods from them on credit without having any intention to pay for the goods. The first four defendants were also charged with obtaining credit by fraud.

Mr. T. S. Whyte-Smith appeared for the prosecution while the first defendant was represented by Mr. E. C. E. Rendall, Mr. M. A. da Silva was for the second defendant while Mr. D. B. Evans was for the fifth. The other three men were not legally represented. Mr. C. E. L. Grist held a watching brief on the part of the second complainant and the Man Ngai Knitting Factory. All defendants returned pleas of not guilty.

"Newly Formed Business."

Outlining the case, Mr. Whyte-Smith said that all defendants were charged with what is commonly described as a "long firm fraud." It was alleged that the first four men were members of a newly-formed business at 62, Cornhill Road, West, which, it was alleged, was formed "for the purpose of obtaining goods on credit and then disposing of them without paying for them. The firm, called the Tak Cheong shop, carried on various business. As regards the fifth and sixth defendants, Mr. Whyte-Smith said they were alleged to have assisted in disposing of the goods and the case for the prosecution was that the defendants obtained goods by credit without meaning to pay for them and were, therefore, guilty of fraud other than by false pretences.

Continuing, Mr. Whyte-Smith said that with regard to the first charge, it could be laid out in six different charges but he did not consider it necessary. He then said that on December 30, 1931, the second defendant and another man went to the Cheung Yung Knitting Factory stating that they were from the Tak Cheong firm. They gave an order for a certain number of jerseys and then asked these to be delivered to the shop. The next day when payment would be made. This was done but when the man from the Knitting Factory asked for payment, the second defendant who was at the shop at the time, said that he could only let them have $100 on account, the balance to be collected the next day. Despite the fact that several calls were made, no further payments were forthcoming and the matter was allowed to drag on until the present charges were instituted. Mr. Whyte-Smith also gave brief outlines of five other instances in connection with the first charge.

Payments On Account.

The first defendant, went on Mr. Whyte-Smith, admitted being the assistant manager and accountant of the shop and, when was arrested, he said that the master of the business had gone to Canton with a travelling trader and they had taken with them the jerseys. Later, however, the jerseys were found to be in the possession of the fifth defendant. The second defendant was the actual purchaser in the first instance and in both the first and second cases, he was the man who was in the shop at the time the goods were delivered and each time he made payments of $100 each.

The third defendant was the purchaser in the second case while the fourth accused was usually in the shop when creditors called. He was also the man who told the complainants that the packages found on the premises contained firecrackers, whereas they were actually worthless cardboard. He also said that he was merely a servant in the shop.

The fifth defendant was the master of the Lee Koe shop and was the receiver of the goods while the sixth was in the employ of the fifth man.

Mr. Whyte-Smith remarked that when the shop was raided, seven large packages, done up in straw matting, were found outside. The fourth defendant said that they were firecrackers but they turned out to be waste cardboard, probably used as a "blind." There was no money in the safe which contained a few books, while six account books were found on the counter but these did not show whether the business had any funds or otherwise. There were also eleven shops, all of which bore the name of the Tak Cheong firm.

After a translator from the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs had given evidence regarding the translation of certain documents, hearing was adjourned.

SWATOW STUDENTS' STRIKE ENDS.

MORE ACTIVITIES AGAINST JAPANESE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

SWATOW, January 17. After lasting two weeks the students' strike was called off on the 14th inst., following a second meeting of the Students' Association in the Union School on that day. Representatives of twenty-five schools were present, and the proceedings opened with a resumé by the Chairman of the previous meeting. Views were again exchanged between the delegates, after which the resolution to end the strike was put to the vote and a majority was returned in favour of same with effect from the 14th.

The other resolutions agreed upon were:—After the students have reported themselves to their respective schools on the morning of the 18th they should all assemble at the Sun Yat Sen Park whence a parade will follow.

On the 16th and 20th the students shall be engaged in extensive propaganda work, the form of which has not been disclosed. The two days following the students shall spend to search for, and examine of Japanese goods in the shops—in other words "taking stock," because it has become known that during the suspension of the activities of the National Salvation Association a good deal of Japanese merchandise was smuggled in.

Trouble with the merchants is anticipated when "stock-taking" is done and demands made that shopkeepers account for what has been secretly sold. For the 23rd and 24th nothing definite has been decided.

The winter vacation starts on the 25th inst., and the schools will reopen on the 5th February, so that between now and then the students will have plenty of time to ponder over their recent efforts.

It must be mentioned that the strike has ended not through any coercion by the authorities but through personal influence and persuasion by the Principals of the different schools.

SOLDIER PLEADS GUILTY.

THEFT FROM EUROPEAN RESIDENCE.

MR. DENNY'S MEDALS.

A further development in the arrest of two soldiers at a Yau-mai restaurant, when articles recently stolen from the residence of Mr. H. L. Denny were traced, was the admittance by one of them that he took part in the theft.

The accused, Privates Thomas Hughes and William Howells, of the South Wales Borderers, were charged before Mr. Williams at Central Magistracy yesterday with larceny from 108, The Peak, of miscellaneous articles, including a General Service Medal and a Victory Medal and miniatures.

Hughes pleaded guilty to the charge, but Howells tendered a plea of not guilty.

Mr. Murphy (Assistant Director of Criminal Intelligence) said that Mr. Denny was indisposed and the police wished the name of the complainant altered to the Inspector General of Police. He asked his Worship to defer sentence on the first defendant and grant a formal remand for one week until Mr. Denny was able to attend Court and give evidence in the case against the other defendant.

Both defendants were remanded for one week in military custody.

KIDNAPPER'S POOR EXCUSE.

CHILD'S FATHER OWED HIM MONEY.

The excuse that the father of the child owed him $70 was given by a defendant when he was charged at Kowloon Magistracy yesterday with kidnapping a four-year-old child.

It was stated that defendant took the child on board the s.s. Charles Hardouin and attracted the attention of the compradore of the ship. He could not give a satisfactory explanation and was taken before the Captain who had him detained and taken back to Hong Kong from Kowloon.

Mr. Fraser, in passing sentence of twelve months' hard labour, said that defendant was not entitled to take away the child even if the father owed him money.

BAG SNATCHER AND BURGLAR.

ASSISTS THE POLICE TO ARREST TWO MORE.

MAY ROAD BURGLARY AND OTHER THEFTS.

An additional charge of theft of money and jewellery to a total value of $135 from 4, Thorpe Manor, May Road, the residence of Dr. A. V. Greaves, was brought against Ng Chuk before Mr. Williams at Central Magistracy yesterday. Defendant was on remand, having pleaded guilty earlier in the week to the theft of a handbag from Mrs. Floyd of the Army Married Quarters, Kennedy Road.

There were two other men involved in charges of receiving stolen property and theft. The second accused was charged with possession of articles of clothing stolen from a matchbox in Donham Road, while the third was charged with theft of a spirit level from a house under construction in Fuk Wing Street, Shamshuipo.

The first defendant admitted the additional charge of theft from the residence of Dr. Greaves, while the second also pleaded guilty to two counts against him. The third admitted stealing the spirit level, but denied receiving property stolen from 4, Thorpe Manor.

Police Discoveries.

Detective Sergeant Fitches told the Court that the first defendant was on remand in connection with the theft of the handbag from Mrs. Floyd when the burglary at Thorpe Manor was reported. He was suspected of the burglary, and investigations revealed that he had been released from gaol only the day before the burglary following a conviction for a theft in May Road.

When defendant was accused of the burglary he admitted it and took the police to 134, Stone Nullah Lane, where they found the second and third defendants. The spirit level was lying on a divan and the third defendant admitted that he had stolen it. On the second defendant the police found a number of pawn tickets referring to property stolen from Dr. Greaves and also from a contractor's matched.

Plans Made in Gaol.

Sergeant Fitches said that the first and second defendants were discharged from gaol at about the same time and they had presumably made their plans before their discharge.

The first defendant was given eight months' hard labour for snatching the handbag from Mrs. Floyd and a further four months imprisonment for larceny from Dr. Greaves. The second defendant received a sentence of three months for receiving stolen property and two months for theft of clothing at Donham Road, the third defendant being given five weeks for stealing the spirit level.

Every Peps Tablet is Silver-Wrapped

Take Them To Protect Your Throat & Chest

THE potency of Peps is due to the ingenious idea of sealing within a silver jacket certain volatile chest-strengthening medicines which are concentrated in every tablet. When you let a Peps dissolve in the mouth, the healing and germ-killing fumes given off, are breathed direct into the lungs where liquid medicines cannot penetrate.

Peps are splendid for allaying that teasing, tickling cough, for loosening choking phlegm; soothing the throat and removing any inflammation or irritation in the air-passages. Take Peps as a preventive as well as a cure for coughs, colds, chills, sore throat, laryngitis, bronchial asthma, catarrh, bronchitis, old folks' and children's chest troubles. Get a bottle to-day!

BRIGHT FUTURE FOR KOWLOON.

OPENING CEREMONY OF NEW GARDEN CITY.

HON. MR. BRAGA'S PREDICTION: PIVOTAL AREA OF RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT.

Before a large and distinguished gathering yesterday, the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G., performed the ceremony of cutting the first sod in connection with the Hong Kong Engineering and Construction Company's Garden City Scheme in Kowloon.

The site adjoins the Diocesan Boys' School and is bounded by Prince Edward Road, Waterloo Road and Argyle Street. It is proposed to divide this area into 85 lots, the smallest of which has an area of 8,000 square feet and the largest 48,000 square feet.

In the words of the Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga, Chairman of the Company, the Garden City will not be in name only, as the special conditions of sale provide that no houses of a greater height than 35 feet will be permitted to be built on any one of the lots and that the houses are to be of a detached or semi-detached type. There will be ground on each lot for a small garden, a tennis court and a garage.

Mr. Braga, in the course of his speech, said that around the site of the Garden City, there was now being erected many important buildings and schools and predicted that the day was not far distant when the Garden City would become the pivotal area in the European residential district in Kowloon.

A souvenir of the occasion in the form of a miniature pickaxe in silver with a blackwood handle was presented to the Hon. Mr. Southern after the ceremony.

"A PLACE OF BEAUTY-----"

The Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga said:—My first pleasure this afternoon, as it is no less an agreeable duty, is to extend to you, on behalf of the Hong Kong Engineering and Construction Company, a hearty welcome to this site and also to thank Mr. Southern for so kindly consenting to come here to turn the first sod in connection with the Company's Garden City Scheme. Mr. Southern's presence confers, as it were, an official blessing on the enterprise which we are about to initiate this afternoon—an enterprise that marks another modest step forward in the sure, unarrested and wonderful development of the Peninsula with its illimitable possibilities for the future. With that blessing and the encouragement and inspiration which we derive from the large assemblage on these grounds, we feel hopeful that the scheme contains all the elements of assured success.

It may not be out of place if I state very briefly the genesis of the scheme. The Hong Kong Engineering and Construction Company came into existence just ten years ago. It was formed at a time when circumstances were not altogether propitious; when Hong Kong was suffering from the dire effects of the Seamen's Strike in 1922. It survived that unsettling experience as it survived also the later troubles which the Colony passed through in 1925. Since then it has gone through a period of trial and stress, having had its share of vicissitudes such as sometimes form the disheartening experience of young undertakings in their earlier existence.

Minorities Overcome.

Dogged misfortune continued relentlessly to pursue the Company until a little less than three years ago when the shareholders wavered in doubt whether to carry on or to proceed to voluntary liquidation. The Directors invited the shareholders to a free and frank discussion and, in the end, it was decided to carry on as best the Company could. That decision, as it proved, determined the turning of the corner in the Company's fortune. The results of our combined efforts, sustained as they have been by the confidence reposed in the Directors by the entire body of shareholders, led to a survival from the difficulties that so persistently beset the Company. With more favourable conditions prevailing, the Company was fortunate in securing contracts that kept our staff and plant remuneratively employed until there was a gradual, if not too large, an accumulation of profits that caused the Board of Directors to look around for a wider field of remunerative activity.

No one who has had experience of the Colony and the security which it enjoys can for a moment doubt that in land and buildings, the safest and surest form of investment can be found. If Sir Robert had been addressing you instead of me, and speaking from personal experience, he would tell us that in landed property and in bricks and mortar no better foundation of assured prosperity can be laid. This is specially true of Hong Kong. Little wonder then that the idea was conceived of securing for this company a large area of Crown land which we hoped we might be able to acquire from Government and which offered possibilities of profitable development.

Before embarking on such a project, involving as it does, a large capital expenditure to be spread over a period of years, the Directors took counsel of their shareholders, of whose interest they are the trusted guardians. An extraordinary meeting was accordingly held last August, at which the shareholders unanimously and unreservedly decided to grant a mandate to the Directors to proceed with the scheme then broadly outlined to them. The selection of the site was the next step to be taken. After interviews, conferences, and discussions with Government, application for the extensive area of Crown land on which we stand was made to the Public Works Department. I am glad of this first opportunity, on behalf of my fellow-directors, to make suitable acknowledgment to the Hon. Mr. H. T. Creasy, C.B.E., the Director of Public Works, and his chief lieutenant for Kowloon, Mr. E. W. Carpenter, O.B.E., for the courteous consideration and prompt attention which the personal visits and communications from our Company received at the hands of the responsible Public Works Officials.

Kowloon's Future.

As you all know the land was put up to public auction on the 19th November last. It has an area of 1,330,000 square feet. While the Company had hoped that it might have been acquired at the upset price, the extensive publication which the notice of sale obtained, invited keen competition. This came from the usual direction, and from people who, like ourselves, believe in, and are fully confident of, the future prospects of Kowloon. Ladies and Gentlemen, a photograph of the whole site has been framed and is now exhibited. On the easel before you is displayed the General Lay-out Plan for the development of this magnificent site. You are invited to inspect it. Besides the obligations we have entered into with the Government, there will be a large initial expenditure in levelling and forming the site according to present plans. We have also undertaken to widen Argyle Street, which, when completed, we have a width of 100 feet, similar to Prince Edward Road on the north side of the lot, and Waterloo Road, which is of a like width. The benefits accruing to the residents by the provision of this section of an important roadway are obvious and need not be enlarged upon.

Our General Lay-out Plan has been in the hands of Government now for some days and we have no doubt that it is receiving the careful consideration of the officials concerned with a view to its being passed with such suggestions for its improvement as may commend themselves to the technical staff of the Public Works Office. I can state with confidence that the Directors will welcome any advice in their Lay-out Plan in the belief that the spirit of co-operation between the Board and the Government is one that has for its object the completion of this large project in the best interests of all concerned. I owe it to the members of the technical staff of the Building Office to state that they have been most helpful to the Company in the criticisms of our provisional lay-out plan.

There is one very important point on which I desire to lay stress. It is this: that associated with the Construction Company in this scheme is the French Mission whose representative I have pleasure in welcoming this afternoon. The Procurator General, the Very Rev. Father Blotiau, has seen fit to participate in the development of the site to the extent of having acquired with the Company a portion of the lot adjoining the Mission's own property on Prince Edward and Waterloo Roads. It goes without saying that any scheme which may be put forward by the French Mission for the development of their section of the site is sure to commend itself to public acceptance.

Sixty-five Lots.

From the plan which I invite you to inspect, you will see that it is proposed to carve out the whole of this immense area into no less than 85 lots, the smallest of which has an area of 8,000 square feet, and the largest 48,000 square feet. This plan suggests itself to our technical staff as the best method for carrying out the Garden City idea connected with the scheme. The Garden City Plan will not be in name only, since, except as regards the large lot fronting on Argyle Street, the special conditions of sale provide that no houses of a greater height than 35 feet will be permitted to be built on any one of the lots and that the houses are to be of a detached or semi-detached type. There will be enough ground on each lot for a small garden, a tennis court and a garage. In those days of quick transportation a garage is almost an indispensable accessory to every house in the suburban area of Kowloon. The circular road shown on the plan will be 40 feet in width; it will give easy access to every lot, and is designed to such a gradient as to be negotiable with little difficulty from the level level. A drive around this part of Kowloon will convince even the most casual observer that many important public and private buildings designed to serve the convenience and requirements of the community have been and are in course of erection within a few minutes' walk from this residential area on which all traffic converges. For example, the most prominent building on the Peninsula, and one of outstanding importance, is La Salle College near Prince Edward Road. Government has made a start with the formation of the proposed new Central British School, also near the same road. The Diocesan Boys' School occupies a commanding position overlooking these grounds and is, like the Christian Brothers' College, one of the leading educational institutions in the Colony. It is our next door neighbour.

New Church.

The Catholic Church is erecting the new church at the junction of Prince Edward and Waterloo Roads and, incidentally, I may state that the building for this church was done by the Construction Company. We hear that the Ecclesiastical Authorities of another large congregation have secured a reservation not far distant for the erection of a place of public worship. A police station is a want that the Government should not be long in supplying. And last but not least a branch post office will be a very much appreciated public improvement in this neighbourhood. A report has gained wide currency that a large boarding school for girls has been planned for this district. It will be a school conducted by Sisters of an Order of world-wide reputation and whose personnel alone suffices to ensure the best that can be obtained in the way of education for girls on the Peninsula. There is a promise from H.E. the Governor that, as soon as the funds of the Government permit, the extension of the Kowloon Hospital will be carried out as a public work of urgency. So that no matter how we regard the various new buildings that are going on and are contemplated around this central spot on which we stand, we can entertain no doubts that K.L.L. 2957 will become more or less the pivotal area in this European residential district of Kowloon.

It needs no prophetic vision to predict the growth of Kowloon into a city of so much importance and wealth that we can confidently cherish the belief that a logical development of Hong Kong will be on this side of the Harbour. The completion of the Vehicular Ferry Service and probably also the inauguration of a trolley bus-service will connote cheaper and better transport facilities for the community. The growing costs of conveyance are perplexing the minds of heads of families with limited incomes. It, therefore, behoves all concerned to endeavour to secure a reduction of the domestic budget.

Belief in Future of Kowloon.

If there should be any doubt as to the wisdom of the Construction Company's scheme, I have the authority of my colleagues for stating that no greater assurance or better proof can be furnished of the Directors' belief in the soundness of their plan than when I say that they have backed their conviction with the largest individual proportions of the financial requirements of the project. They are men who are prepared to stand or fall by the future of Kowloon, and in the maturity of their years, experience and knowledge of Hong Kong and the inherent stability of the Colony, they look forward confidently to the materialisation of a project which, when completed, will have contributed its quota to make of Kowloon "a place of beauty and a joy for ever."

It remains for me now, in the name of the Hong Kong Engineering and Construction Company, to ask the Hon. Mr. Southern to be good enough to initiate the project we have cherished for some months past by cutting the first sod as the first material step leading to the creation of a new section of Kowloon that for excellence of situation, beauty of outlook, serenity of location and conformity with surrounding amenities, will be without an equal on the Peninsula. (Applause.)

HON. MR. SOUTHERN'S SPEECH.

The Hon. Mr. Southern, after turning the first sod, said:—I have listened with interest to Mr. Braga's remarks on the genesis of this scheme and to his lucid explanation of the excellent lines on which the scheme is planned. We all know Mr. Braga's enthusiasm for Kowloon. It is an enthusiasm born of knowledge and experience and will carry this project well on its way to success. I gratefully acknowledge Mr. Braga's tribute to the Public Works Department. Kowloon will lose an able and enthusiastic friend when, to our regret, Mr. Carpenter severs his connection with the Government service in a few months' time. He has well earned his retirement but we shall be very sorry to let him go. (Hear, hear.)

It is with very great pleasure that I have just turned the first sod of the new Garden Suburb of Kowloon. As you are aware, one of the great local problems of the time is the overcrowding of the City of Victoria and to a less extent of parts of Kowloon. The early residents of Hong Kong did not possess our knowledge of the need of light and air in the prevention of disease and, faced with the necessity of providing accommodation for an ever growing population, they could think of no better method than the crowding of as many buildings as possible on the most easily accessible areas. We live in more fortunate times, and while we have a long way to go before we shall have liquidated our legacy in the matter of overcrowding, especially in connection with the very difficult problem of overcrowding in the areas occupied by the working classes, we are at last taking steps to see that future generations shall not blame us for the same mistakes.

Advantages of Country Life.

Our task has been rendered easier by the increased mobility to which the motor vehicles has so largely contributed and by the improved availability for building of areas which in the past would have been regarded as entirely unsuitable. A centrifugal force is at present operating in and around all great cities and this present scheme is one manifestation of its influence in this Colony. The modern tendency is to encourage people to live away from confined business areas in which their work is of necessity concentrated and to seek refreshment and repose in houses so situated that they can enjoy the advantages of a country life—its clear air, its gardens and its quiet, and yet retain some of the amenities of the civilized life of the town. To attain this, and the idea of the garden city has grown up—an idea which the Cadbury family did so much to foster in Bourneville—the idea of a settlement where families of moderate means could live in houses with ample garden space around them and where they would have opportunities for open air recreation such as would be denied them in the crowded areas of the city.

The Kowloon Tong Scheme.

Individuals in Hong Kong have appreciated the value of suburban or country houses but these have generally been the privilege of the wealthier classes. The first big step in Hong Kong towards bringing these privileges with the reach of those of moderate means was the Kowloon Tong scheme which, after certain vicissitudes and with a good deal of Government help, was at last brought to a very successful conclusion. I rejoice that private enterprise, profiting by the experience of Kowloon Tong, has such enthusiasm for the garden city idea and such faith in the future of Hong Kong that it is prepared to spend its capital in creating a new garden city area in this part of Kowloon.

We wish the promoters of this scheme every success, for they deserve it. The temptation to cover the area with houses must be hard to resist but they have resisted it and as an enthusiast for open spaces in residential areas I offer them my congratulations and hope that the successful fruition of their efforts may inspire others to follow their example. (Applause.)

A SOUVENIR.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Sir Robert Ho Tung, on behalf of the Hong Kong Engineering and Construction Company, presented the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern with a souvenir of the occasion. The souvenir took the form of a miniature pickaxe in silver with a blackwood handle. It was enclosed in a blackwood case with a silver plate containing the following inscription: Hong Kong Engineering and Construction Co., Ltd., Garden City Scheme. HONG KONG, JANUARY 21, 1932.

BRITISH BROADCASTING.

The development of the wireless continues steadily in Great Britain as in other countries, and a general survey of the British field should be of interest. That survey is provided at the end of each year by the British Broadcasting Corporation in its
"B.B.C. Year Book." For the fifth year in succession the Year Book has now appeared, and it reviews exhaustively British aims and achievements.

In 1931 the event of the year, from the British Broadcasting Corporation's point of view, was the completion of Broadcasting House in Portland Place. For nine years the Corporation has been housed at Savoy Hill, between the Strand and the River Thames, and it will move to Portland Place this month. The new building is a large and imposing structure, and no pains have been spared to make it worthy of the work that will be achieved in it.

In a description of the new building the Architect, Lieut.-Colonel G.
Val Myer, states that "after exploring scores of different systems of planning, the problem of accommodating a large number of studios
and their suites within the space available was quite suddenly solved.
Instead of the studios being all on one floor, or on two floors, as originally planned, they would be all in one tower, so that, given a good service of lifts, circulation would actually be easier than if they had been all on the same level

and, of course, larger and more shapely studios could be provided."

Once this key idea had been found the plan was rapidly developed. In designing the sculpture for the building Mr. Eric Gill accepted a suggestion put forward by the Corporation that the "literary" subject of the carving should be Shakespears's Ariel.

A feature of peculiar significance,
in view of the fears once expressed that broadcasting would seriously injure the newspaper trade, is that the Press does not seem to have suffered at all in consequence of recent developments. On the contrary, information about broadcasting is now "good news." Another item of interest published in the Year Book is that relating to the Corporation's own newspapers,
which deal exclusively with radio activities. They are the Listener, the Radio Times, and the World
Radio. On the 16th of January, 1931, the circulation of the Radio
Times was 1,693,000, an increase of 634,000 during the previous two years. During the same period the circulation of the World Radio had increased from 127,000 to 258,000.

Obviously British Broadcasting is in a flourishing condition, and this is confirmed by the experience of the wireless trade during the past year. The Radio Exhibition held at Olympia was unusually successful. The attendance was 50,000 more than the previous year's attendance, and business done was estimated at £20,000,000, an increase of fifty per cent. over that at the 1930 Exhibition. Further, manufacturers were so impressed by the Olympia success that there was a strong demand for an exhibition in the North of England and the whole of the stock of exhibits was transported in a fleet of motor-lorries to Manchester, where an exhibition was opened at the City Hall on October 7th. It is, therefore, not a matter for surprise that the sale of wireless sets in 1931 was estimated to be over one million, as against 640,000 during the previous year.

From October, 1930, to September, 1931, the number of licences issued had increased from 3,250,000 to 3,400,000. By the end of November this year it was reported that there were 4,213,000 licences in force. The total number of actual listeners in Great Britain certainly exceeds 13,000,000. The figures published in the Year Book show that, out of an income of £1,224,335 in 1930, revenue expenditure absorbed £1,038,352,
and £194,150 was transferred to capital account. Of the last-mentioned sum £150,000 represents the provision for future expenditure.

It is declared by the Corporation that this big sum is necessary because in spite of its rapid growth broadcasting is young and improvments in all its branches of technique are being made.

The Year Book is comprehensive in its scope. It does not confine itself to British broadcasting questions, although British questions are its main concern. It discusses every phase of the problems with which the Corporation has to deal. There are chapters on technical problems
and on all kinds of programmes and the difficulties encountered in arranging them. The actual broadcasts of the year—from vaudeville to religious services—are in some cases discussed, and there is scarcely a question of interest to the listener which is not dealt with.

News and Views

Tale of the Day.

When a girl has pretty teeth she never fails to see a joke.

Tramps' Rations.

Tests are being carried out at Barnet Poor Law Institution in an attempt to arrive, at some conclusions as to the morning appetite of the average "casual." The problem to be solved is whether 8oz. of bread for breakfast is too heavy a meal.

These tests have been undertaken
because a complaint has been made to the Guardians Committee that the bread left over from breakfast is daily swept into sacks and wasted. This bread is now to be collected and weighed each day, so that the committee may arrive at an estimate as to the amount consumed
by each inmate.

Egypt Pays in Paper.

The Egyptian Government recently decided that the payment of interest on the Egyptian Public Debt
was to be made in paper sterling instead of in gold. Since this decision, the French and Italian Commissioners of the Egyptian Public Debt have notified the Egyptian Government that they have filed cases in the Mixed Courts of Egypt against the Government on behalf of the French and Italian bondholders claiming payment in gold. Until a decision has been given by the Court, the bondholders will be paid 25 per cent. less than they usually receive in interest.

been described as the world's most beautiful girl athlete, has announced within a few hours:

Her suit for divorce, and Her intention that she was married two years ago, that she had filed a suit against her husband and that, if it succeeded, she would marry Mr. Byron Mitchell,

Salvation Army and Devil's Island.

The Salvation Army proposes to send out an expedition in the spring of next year to the French convict settlements, commonly known as Devil's Island, and to open hostels there.

The Salvation Army Year-book, 1932, describing the lives of the convicts, points out that they have even the hope of one day returning to their native land to bucy them up.

Ghastly Life.

"Under the system known as debtors' prison a man sentenced to less than eight years' hard labour must upon completion of that term reside in the colony for a further period equaling that of his sentence; if his sentence exceeded eight years he is forced after his liberation to remain in the colony
all his life. The lot of the liberees, of whom there are 2,400, is, in fact, worse than that of the convicts.

They have to supply their own needs: the possibilities of employment are very rare, and they soon become exhausted, begin to steal or commit other crimes, until finally—almost fortunately—they are reinterned."

Local Notes and Events

Two cases of diphtheria were reported on Tuesday.

L. Ho, a young mechanic, of 5, Tunk Lane, has reported to the police, the loss of a gold watch, chain and appendage, valued at $100,
which were stolen whilst he was asleep in a cubicle at 17, Graham Street, first floor.

Two fire floats were despatched yesterday to North Point when a fire was observed at about 6 p.m.
The match at the Chinese Athletic Association was involved and a message was sent to the Shaikwan Police Station. The members were able, however, to put the fire out before the arrival of assistance.

An accountant, of 1, Cochrane Street, was fined $10 by Mr.
Williams at the Central Police Court yesterday for keeping six monkeys in cages which were too small to allow them sufficient room.
Mr. P. J. O'Brien, Inspector of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, informed his Worship that he had warned the defendant
earlier in the day.

M. Pasquier, Governor General of Indo-China, is due to arrive in Hong Kong this morning on the French mine-sweeper Inconstant. Here he will join Vice-Admiral Herr on the flagship Waldeck Rousseau.

The murder of a cook on Monday morning at 112, The Peak, had a sequel at Central Magistracy yesterday when Chau Sim, a young woman, described as a house ama-h, was produced in connection with the offence. A formal remand for one week was granted on the application of Chief Detective Inspector A. N.
Reynolds.

The Portuguese transport Africa,
Captain A. E. Pedron, arrived here yesterday morning from Macao, and went round to Aberdeen to be docked.

Four Stamps With £25,000.

Four stamps, worth £25,000, are on view in one case at an exhibition of stamps in Messrs. Harmer Brooks' auction rooms, Bond-street,
W. They are:—

The one-cent British Guiana,
for which Mr. Arthur Hind paid £7,750 in 1922, the highest priced stamp in the world.

Two of the red penny stamps
which a local watchmaker named Barnard engraved for the Governor's wife in Mauritius to frank her invitation to a ball in 1847—£11,000 has been refused for the envelope bearing these stamps.

The blue twopenny, which Barnard engraved on the other corner of the envelope and which is worth probably £5,000.

Girl Who Missed the Train.

The story of a London girl's hustle:

Miss E. M. Stead missed the boat-train at Waterloo.

She engaged a motor-car and officials of the liner Majestic were told.

She had an hour and three-quarters to cover the 80 miles.

At Southampton she found the liner was 50ft. off.
A tug was in readiness and she got safely aboard.

France's Foreign Labour Force.

The large foreign labour force,
which she imported after the war,
has now become an encumbrance to France during her unemployment crisis. The cry of "Frenchmen first" has been raised, and the unfortunate foreigners are likely to suffer severely.

France's foreign labour force now
totals 1,893,018, 250,000 Spaniards, 230,000 Belgians, 80,000 Swiss, 70,000
Russians, 45,000 Germans and Austrians, 40,000 Greeks and Armenians, and 38,000 Portuguese.

By no section of the foreign workers is the situation regarded with greater anxiety than by the Russians, many of whom are now faced with the prospect of starving or returning to their own country.

A Musical Spider.

That music has an effect on various animals, notably snakes, has long been known. There has just come from an absolutely impeccable
source, a strange story of a spider.

A wireless enthusiast noticed that,
whenever classical music was being played a large black spider would emerge from some hiding place,
make its way to the radio cabinet,
place itself thereon, and remain
while the music lasted, gently waving its antennae in time to the beat.

As soon as the music was ended the creature took its departure, and
—here its highbrow tastes were unmistakably demonstrated—if dance music began it vanished in a swift scuttle quite unlike its usual dignified progress.

Slain, possibly, by an extra "hot"
number.

Looking Back 25 Years.

Fifty years ago this month
Chinese servants in Hong Kong were all deserting foreign employers in consequence of notices having been circulated among them, that those who remained, would on treated as traitors by the Chinese authorities. The relatives of loyal servants were got at and molested.
Things were so bad that it was strongly recommended that all women and children should go to live on the ships then in the harbour, until reinforcements should arrive.—Hong Kong Daily Press,
January 21, 1907.

Looking Back 50 Years.

The Chinese students lately returned from the United States have been allowed at Tientsin to select their own professions.

Good News Indeed.

Smokers will regard the announcement, appearing on this page, by Messrs. John Hutchison & Co. as very good news indeed. The prices of various brands of cigarettes manufactured by Messrs. Godfrey Phillips, Ltd., of London, have been considerably reduced. Army Club, for example, have come down to 60 cents for fifty. De Roske Ameri-

been reduced in price. With rumours come.

EUROPE'S DEBTS PROBLEM

AMERICA'S REPLY TO FRANCE

EUROPEANS MUST RESTORE CONFIDENCE AMONG THEMSELVES

NO INTERFERENCE BY UNITED STATES

PARIS, January 19.

It is officially confirmed that M. Laval has sounded the American Ambassador, Mr. Walter Edge, in regard to the chances of the United States agreeing to a six months' or a year's extension of the Hoover Moratorium.

Mr. Edge has not yet received a formal reply from the State Department, but has indicated that public and political opinion in the United States is against the renewal of the Moratorium.

It is stated that Mr. Edge also pointed out that as no Allied payments to America are due before December 15, 1932, there will be a de facto five and half months' extension of the moratorium.

Moreover, the United States presidential elections are being held in November and the result will doubtless influence the subsequent American attitude.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.

It is expected that the United States Government will reply to M. Laval's moratorium, overture by declaring that Europe must seek her own settlement.

While there is no disposition in the United States to "slam the door" against the possibility of further American concessions, it is held to be essential to any such concessions that Europeans first restore confidence among themselves.

When that has been done, it is indicated, America may consider a demand for further debt postponement.

LATER.

The American Government's reply has been despatched. They State Department has informed M. Laval that Europe must settle its debts problem without interference by the United States.

RUSSY, January 20.

The situation regarding the Lausanne Conference is still indefinite and is likely to remain so until M. Laval receives the vote of confidence for which he is asking the French Chamber, and until the exchanges, which are still proceeding, between the various Government result in a definite understanding regarding procedure.

IF EUROPE WON'T OR CAN'T PAY, WHAT IS MR. MELLON GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

The question of War Debts, Reparations and their political relations is discussed, by A.A.B. of the London Evening Standard, in the following article:—

My predominant fear is that Germany be driven into some sort of alliance, political or commercial, with Soviet Russia. Germany, since she has lost her colonies, requires a field for expansion, not only of population, which is nearly double that of Great Britain, but of her wonderful technical and commercial ability. Already German engineers, and miners, and managers are largely employed by Stalin in forwarding the Five Years' Plan.

Germany's Equipment.

People sometimes ask, when told that Germany is bound to default, what has she done with the huge loans that have been poured into her lap during the last five years by American and English financiers? With characteristic foresight the Germans have spent that money in re-equipping their factories and workshops and in what we call "social services," that is, in building municipal schools, hospitals, laboratories, maternity clinics, and generally in binding up the wounds of her industrial classes who suffered in the war. At this hour Germany is probably better equipped for industrial competition than any other country in Europe, and that she has achieved this result with other people's money is perfectly characteristic of the nation. Repay? Of course she can't repay just now. But what then? Give Germany time, and with her new mills and factories and her new technical schools she will pay in a few years.

What of Locarno?

France sees the rehabilitation of her mortal enemy, which she had hoped to prevent, and no doubt will talk about the sanctions of the Treaty of Versailles and occupying the Ruhr. But there is the Treaty of Locarno, and the League of Nations, of which M. Briand is practically the leader. Democracy has one merit, that, in the modern world, at all events, it will not fight. France will have to do without her reparations. But if Germany doesn't pay her reparations and her war debts, and only a portion of her commercial or private debts—she can't repay—everybody and everything—England cannot pay her tribute to the United States. "It's an ill wind," etc.; and the one benefit arising from the depreciation of the pound and the world slump is that American politicians are beginning to change heart. Lord Balfour's original proposal was that all reparations and war debts should be cancelled.

Revision Unavoidable.

Human nature being what it is, that policy was scouted as a counsel of perfection. Balfour next proposed that England should pass on to America all that she received from her European debtors—Germany, France and Italy. As that amount, after Mr. Churchill had forgiven France and Italy half their debts, covered the full amount of our debt to the United States, the Americans had no objection.

When, however, our gold pound had fallen to 13s. in dollars, Mr. Mellon perceived that our annual tribute to our allies, whose battle we fought, must rise from £32,000,000 to £48,000,000, and the sternness of his mood in 1926 has melted. He now goes so far as to say that some revision of the whole question is unavoidable.

A Lecture.

In that year and until 1923 a powerful body of opinion, led by Mr. F. W. Peabody, and supported by a crowd of the best names in America, such as N. M. Butler, H. B. Joy, all the Bishops, and all the Presidents of Universities, Putnam, Bancroft, Dana, and many more, organised an association for the cancellation of war debts, and addressed Mr. Secretary Mellon to that effect. But five years ago America was still running before the wind of prosperity, and Mr. Mellon, a millionaire magnate, of the aluminium trust, sitting snug behind his tariff wall, read Messrs. Peabody and his professors and bishops a lecture in the best Treasury style.

The war loans to England, he said, were not a war contribution, but a commercial transaction, money for goods delivered, adding, with unbecoming reticence, that debts were not a bad means of keeping Europe peaceful, industrious, and frugal. But he sings a different tune now, after five years.

Teaching a Lesson.

Sweet are the uses of adversity, if they teach a trust magnate a little political economy, and teach his practice with generosity. Mr. Mellon tells the Americans that England is hard pressed, and he recommends a revision of the debt settlement. Will he succeed with his countrymen? It is doubtful. We must expect an exhibition of all the violence and vulgarity of which American politicians are capable, when their pockets are touched.

Messrs. Hoover and Mellon know that the moratorium is only a means of getting past the next presidential election, and that war debts and reparations are finished. But in such a matter a two-thirds majority of the Senate and a majority in the House of Representatives are necessary. This the President's Government will probably fail to secure, until Senator Borah and his supporters realise, as they will very shortly, that they may get nothing at all.

Let us be realistic for once. If Europe, including England, can't or won't pay, what is Mr. Mellon going to do about it? Echo answers what?

TIMBER DUMPING BY RUSSIA

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT COMPLAINS TO BRITAIN

British Manufacturers' Fears

LONDON, Jan. 20.

Russian trade has suddenly again obtruded British Imperial relationships.

Amid the preparations for the Imperial Economic Conference a disturbing element has arisen in the shape of reported negotiations by a group of timber importers to buy Russian timber on a scale that will so seriously affect the West Canadian industry that the Canadian Government have been provoked to intervene with Britain.

Keenest apprehensions are also aroused in British manufacturers lest a successful consummation of the timber contract will open the door for a system of trading with the ordinary trader will be totally unable to compete, owing to the negligible labour costs in Russia, coupled with the Soviet policy (which has already been instanced painfully for farmers in the case of dumped wheat) of selling regardless of cost.

The Times in a leader goes the length of demanding that all countries trading with Russia reach a common agreement to combat this unparalleled menace inherent in a situation which sidetracks ordinary trade methods between nationals of various countries, and introduces a system under which private traders are inveigled into trading with a huge state corporation controlling immense resources, able to play off individual traders, against each other and traders of one country against those of another.

GOLD SHIPMENT TO FRANCE

[REUTER'S AMERICAN SERVICE.]

New York, Jan. 19.

It is reported in Wall Street that arrangements have been completed for the shipping of $25,000,000 to Paris from New York this week as part of France's withdrawal of her balances in the United States.

These withdrawals are expected to involve some $412,500,000. It is explained that these shipments will not affect the United States' gold supply since the balances held in New York on French account have been subject to delivery on call. The transfer of the balances to Paris is attributed to French expectations of easier money policy in the United States, involving a lower rate of interest for French funds in America.

INAUGURATION OF CAPE AIR MAIL

IMPORTANT PHASE IN EMPIRE COMMUNICATIONS

Great 4-Engined Plane Leaves Croydon

RUSSY, Jan. 20.

SHORTLY after mid-day to-day one of the great four-engined land-planes of Imperial Airways took off from Croydon, carrying bags of mail which will reach Cape Town, eight thousand miles distant, in eleven days.

This inauguration of the Cape Air Mail marked a new and important phase in Empire air communications which have been steadily developed during the last eight years. The new route will not open for regular passenger traffic until March, but Mr. Bertram, Deputy Director of Civil Aviation, and Sir Vyvyan Vyvyan were travelling on the service to-day.

The new route is the longest organised air line in the world and immense difficulties have been overcome during its organisation through the length of Africa. Deserts and swamps in the north, rapids on the Nile, high altitudes and high temperatures near the equator, forest and bush country and a liability to violent storms make this airway "one of the most trying to prepare for commercial operation."

20,000 LETTERS CARRIED.

LONDON, Jan. 20.

Punctually 12.30 p.m. the giant Imperial Airways' liner Helena hopped off from Croydon, thus inaugurating the weekly air mail to Cape Town, in addition it carries as passengers Air Vice-Marshal Sir Vyvyan Vyvyan and Lady Vyvyan, and the Deputy Director of Civil Aviation, Mr. Bertram. The plane carried 20,000 letters, and 150 parcels including a large box of eggs.

AIR MAILS POPULAR

STRIKING BRITISH INCREASE

RUSSY, Jan. 19.

BRITISH INCOME TAX RETURNS

SATISFACTORY FIGURES MAINTAINED

£28,000,000 Paid in One Week

RUSSY, Jan. 19.

The remarkable response which income-tax payers made to the request for prompt payment of the large instalment which became due on January 1 is shown by Treasury figures issued to-night to have been more than maintained in the second week of the quarter.

During the week ending January 19, income tax paid amounted to £28,000,000, an increase of no less than £16,000,000, or approximately 175 per cent., over the amount collected in the corresponding week of last year.

The total amount collected between the 1st and 18th January was nearly £30,000,000 compared with £22,000,000,000 in the first seventeen days of last year.

The collection of surtax to-day is equally satisfactory. During the week ending January 16, there was received £7,500,000, compared with £2,450,000 in the corresponding week of last year, and the total amount received in the first sixteen days of the year is £15,000,000 which shows an increase of £7,000,000 over the total received in the corresponding period of 1931.

CHIANG STILL AT HANGCHOW

HELD UP BY BAD WEATHER

T. V. Soong Mentioned as New Finance Minister

NANKING, Jan. 20.

A telephone message from Hangchow states that Chiang Kai Shek was unable to take off for Nanking this morning, as intended, but he will fly to the capital this afternoon if the weather clears up. If not, he will definitely leave for Nanking tomorrow morning.

General Wang Shih Ho, commander of Chiang Kai Shek's bodyguards, arrived here this morning with a number of his men. Chiang's return here is now considered a certainty.

NANKING, Jan. 20.

The capital has been in a fever of excitement all day expecting Chiang Kai Shek from Hangchow.

It was feared late this afternoon that flying is impossible in the present bad weather conditions, so San Fe, Wang Ching Wei and Ho Ying Ching left for Shanghai by train and are coming to Nanking tomorrow, while Chiang Kai Shek is flying here tomorrow if the weather is suitable.

MINISTERIAL CHANGES FORECAST

(Fah Tze Yat Pao.)

SHANGHAI, Jan. 20.

A Hangchow report stated that Marshal Chiang's return to Nanking might be followed by a change in a number of ministerial posts. The re-appointment of Dr. Wellington Koo as Foreign Minister is forecasted, while a rumour in circulation is that Mr. T. V. Soong will be given the portfolio of finance.

MR. YU YU JEN AT CANTON

CANTON, Jan. 20.

Mr. Yu Yu Jen's visit to Canton is in connection with the attempt to reconcile Nanking and Canton. Last night he had a secret conversation with Commander-in-Chief Chen Tiao Tong and General Pei Chung Hsi. It is learned that as a result of Mr. Yu Yu Jen's effort the anxiety of the Canton and Kwangsi military leaders about the possibility of Marshal Chiang Kai Shek returning as dictator has been dispelled. Mr. Yu is alleged to have declared that as Mr. Hu Han Min persistently refuses to participate in the "Unification Government" (Continued on next column.)

JAPANESE CLASH WITH POLICE

ATTEMPT TO FIRE CHINESE FACTORY

Jap. Reinforcements Demanded

SHANGHAI, Jan. 20.

A party of fifty Japanese youths attacked a Chinese towel factory outside the Settlement, on the north side, this morning, throwing blazing fireworks there, hoping to set it on fire, after which they hastily returned to the Settlement.

On the borders, however, they met a Settlement Police patrol and assault it, one Chinese policeman being fatally stabbed and two seriously injured. One Chinese policeman emptied his pistol, the result of which being that three Japanese were sent to hospital, of which one has since died.

It appears that this morning's attack on the factory was a reprisal to an attack by Chinese, alleged to have been from this factory, made on five Japanese priests yesterday, all of whom were sent to hospital, two being in a serious condition.

This afternoon the Japanese held a mass meeting when they demanded naval and military reinforcements.

ment." Marshal Chiang's return is, however, a necessity particularly during the present internal and external difficulties. However, the Nanking leaders have made preparations to guard against any possibility of Chiang becoming a dictator again.

High hope is expressed in Canton political circles that Canton-Nanking relations might be considerably improved as a result of Mr. Yu's visit.

CANTON, Jan. 19.

He was accompanied by Dr. C. C. Wu, the newly appointed Governor of Kwangtung; Mr. Tang Chak Yu, and Mr. Lam Yick Chung, the acting Governor of Kwangtung. The Nanking visitor was accorded a rousing welcome and is being invited to elaborate banquets and entertainments.

INTERPORT SOCCER.

TEAM SELECTED.

We have been officially informed that the team to go to Shanghai has been selected. The players chosen to make the trip are:—

Rogers; Martin, Strange; Hay, McKelvie, Bliss; Davies, B. Gosano, Howe, D. Leonard and Hughes.

According to "present arrangements," the selected team will play the Borderers on the Kowloon ground on Saturday. Howe, although selected, may not be able to take the field in that game as he is still suffering from a bad leg. The reserves selected are Mullane, Skinner and Sheppard.

YESTERDAY'S TRIAL.

Kowloon Football Club ground was the scene of a rather tame match yesterday when the Interport "Probables" team beat the South Wales Borderers by two goals to one in the second trial game.

The standard of the football was very poor indeed and the selectors would have to look further afield for better talent if they want to come out top dogs when the local team meets Shanghai.

For yesterday's game the teams were:—

"Probables": Rogers; Martin, Strange; Hay, McKelvie, Bliss; C. Pile, B. Gosano, D. Leonard, Sheppard and Hughes.

Borderers: Williams; Mullane, Morrison; Morgan, Channing, Underwood; Harris, Davis, Jones, Tedmore and Duncan.

The Match.

Early in the game, Sheppard got possession of the ball and made a spectacular run down the field to beat Williams with a beautiful low shot. This was the only goal scored in the first half for the soldiers found the Club defence too sound to get anywhere near shooting distance.

After the resumption, the "Probables" played better together although they missed quite a few chances of scoring until D. Leonard got the ball when well-placed and slammed it into the net, giving Williams no chance. Holding a two-nil lead, the "Probables" were content to settle down to a defensive game and towards the close Duncan sent in a shot which deflected off Martin's head into the goal to make the final score read 2-1 in favour of the "Probables."

NEW BILLIARDS RECORD BREAK

[TIMOTHY RUTTER'S AGENCY.]

ALL-INDIA CRICKETERS FOR ENGLAND.

TEAM TO BE CHOSEN AFTER A SERIES OF TRIAL GAMES.

GOOD REPORTS OF GHALAM MOHAMED AND NAIDU.

[By P. F. WARNER.]

Cricket knows no creed, religion, or politics. It welcomes all to its fold, and the English public are certain to give a warm and generous reception to the All-India cricket team which is due to arrive in London about April 23, and for whom a strong programme has been drawn up, including a Test match, v. England, at Lords, on June 25, 27, 29, and fixtures with all the first-class counties, the two Universities, and strong England XI's both at Scarborough and Folkestone.

The arrangements for the tour have been under the supervision of a committee appointed by the Cricket Board of Control of India, consisting of Sir Leslie Wilson (Chairman), General Sir Charles Harrington, Mr. H. S. Malik, Colonel K. M. Mistry, and Major E. W. C. Ricketts, who will act as manager of the team.

The Best Ambassador.

I am one of those who believe, perhaps wrongly, that a well-chosen cricket team is the best possible ambassador—as good as, and certainly cheaper than, any League of Nations. The Indians come to play and to learn—they are cricketers, pure and simple—and know no politics. The politicians love the word "Formula," but whether the size and shape of future conferences—Round Table—flat or square—there will always be a bond between the cricketers of this country and of India; and it is possible that cricket may discover the Formula which the politicians have, so far, failed to find.

Some day a historian will arise who will trace the influence of a bit of leather and a piece of willow on not only the British Empire, but on the world—for the sun never sets on cricket, and that influence will be not inconsiderable.

Cricket is synonymous with all that is straight, and fair, and honourable. It has great traditions, and every year sees the extension of its sway. Twenty-five years ago only Australia dared challenge us at our national game. To-day we have taught the world so well that not only Australia, but South Africa, New Zealand, the West Indies, and now India enter the lists against us. The school-master should be proud of his ability to teach, as he is most assuredly proud of his pupils.

First Cricket in India.

It was our soldiers who first introduced cricket into India and inculcated its rites. Then came the visits of Lord Hawke's team, and of M.C.C., together with a band of professionals for coaching duties, while the personal example and enthusiasm of such good men and fine cricketers as Lord Harris and Sir Stanley Jackson—both captains of England in their time—and of Lord Willingdon have given life and encouragement to the game.

And we in England do not forget the incomparable "Ranji" so greatly admired and liked on every cricket ground—while the England XI of to-day is graced by the presence of "Duleep," Ranji's nephew—and the Nawab of Pataudi's glorious innings for Oxford v. Cambridge has enriched the pages of University cricket. "Duleep" learnt all his cricket here, and has definitely thrown in his lot with English cricket to the discomfiture, we may hope, of the Australia bowlers a year hence, but it is rumoured that the Nawab may captain the coming team.

A Bowler's Nightmares.

In his day "Ranji" was supreme, and I remember a professional bowler remarking to me that he had not slept well as "I dreamt last night, Sir, that I was bowling against eleven Ranjis," and he added "it was indeed a ghastly nightmare." Ranji appears but once—if as often —in a generation, but report speaks well of men like Naidu and Ghalam Mohamed—a fine all-rounder; and if we have a reasonably fine summer we may expect some interesting and attractive cricket from a team which will be composed entirely of Indian born men.

The side will be chosen after the conclusion of a series of Trial games which are to take place during next month, and the presence of "Duleep" in India at the moment will be of no little assistance to the Selection Committee. The fixture list is as follows:—

VARSITY TROUNCE GERMAN CLUB.

The Hong Kong Varsity Hockey team trounced the German Club by 5-2 at the former's ground yesterday. The Club fielded a weak team, and was hard pressed throughout the game. The Varsity forward line was well led by Sousa, who netted four of the five goals. The outstanding player of the Club was their centre forward, Muller, who found the net twice.

Half-time score: Varsity 2; German Club 0.
Final score: Varsity 5; German Club 2.

CRICKET TRIAL: HONG KONG BORN. THE REST?

[TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONG KONG DAILY PRESS."]

Sir,—In the cricket notes by "L.B.W." which appeared in your issue of to-day, reference was made to the "Interport match," which, I gather, is to take place in Shanghai next May. I wonder if the powers-that-be are arranging any trial games and if so when are these scheduled to come off? It would be a good idea to fix up some all-day games (on Sundays if need be) and a very good trial match would be those born in Hong Kong v. The Rest (including Services).

I do not know whether there has ever been a match of this nature here, but if only to compare the cricket of those who learnt the game in England and local cricketers, such a match ought to create a lot of interest. I am making this suggestion for what it is worth, but I do hope it will catch the eye of the selection committee. The League management too, might be persuaded to make this an annual fixture to be played on one of our numerous holidays.—Yours, etc.,

"OFF-BREAK."

HOCKEY.

SEM SHIELD COMPETITION.

ARMY AGAIN BEATEN BY CLUB.

The Army hockey team, which was defeated by the Hong Kong Hockey Club in the first match of the Sem Shield competition, was again beaten by the same team at the U.S.R.C. ground yesterday, when they met in their return match. Incidentally the score was the same, 4-2.

Yesterday's game was a close and well-contested one, and despite the handicap of two of their regular players, Divett and Francois, the Clubians combined well and fully deserved their win. The soldiers played better than before and on many occasions came very near to scoring. Their attack and combination, in particular, had improved tremendously and it was rather hard luck for them to lose.

The game started with the Army attacking but the Club defence was sound. For the first twenty minutes play was even until Smith scored for the Army with a beautiful cross shot.

The Clubians attacked and Owen-Hughes missed an open goal. After about ten minutes play in which both goals were visited in turn, E. V. Reed equalised for the Club.

Sound Defence.

From the bully-off the Army attacked but found A. W. Reed and Rodger sound in defence. After this, play was again transferred to the Army side, and from a free hit at the goal mouth Reed put the Clubians ahead.

At this stage play was mostly in mid-field until a fine breakaway by Owen-Hughes who, after tempting the Army's goalie to come out in an endeavour to intercept him, passed to Evans who shot into the empty net. The interval arrived with the Club leading by three goals to one.

Shortly after the resumption, the Army reduced the arrears through Johnson, who, from a pass by Smith, sent in a shot which completely beat Gregory.

The Army continued to attack but many of their chances were spoilt by off-side and fouls. Shortly before the final whistle blew Evans netted again to put the Clubians winners by four goals to two.

Owen-Hughes, Reed and Evans were the pick of the Club forwards, while A. W. Reed and Rodger played well in defence. For the Army, Johnson, Smith and Williams combined well in the forward line; Capt. Huxford and Pole did their bit in the defence.

The teams were:—
Club: Gregory; Woodward, J. Rodger; Rodolfo, A. A. Dand (Capt.), A. W. Reed; E. C. Fincher, D. B. Evans, A. V. Reed, Telly and Owen-Hughes.

LOST AFTER LANDING AT DOCKS.

London, Dec. 29.—Malayans in London were astonished to read in their papers on Wednesday evening of the "disappearance of Mr. Robert Parker Taylor, the 45 years-old manager of a big group of rubber plantations in Perak (Malay States), after landing at Silvertown Docks to rejoin his wife and daughter for Christmas," writes the Straits Times London correspondent.

We presumed that the Mr. Taylor who had vanished so mysteriously was none other than the well-known manager of the Perak River Valley Estate, Padang Rengas, and we read on to discover that:

"Mrs. Taylor, who has kept a vigilant eye at her home at Hove with her 11-year-old daughter Patricia, is coming to London to-day to join in the search and to ask for further help from Scotland Yard."

"She fears that her husband, who was believed to have £500 in notes or a banker's draft in his possession, may have been robbed or is being detained by force until the draft is cashed."

"She has had only one communication since her husband's ship, the Blue Funnel liner Theosus, docked on Dec. 16. That was a telegram which read: 'Detained here to-day. Writing. Bob.'"

"The telegram was handed in at 10.30 a.m. last Thursday (Dec. 17) at the Vauxhall Bridge Road Post Office."

Mrs. Taylor told me, when I got into touch with her late on Wednesday night, that "this telegram did not sound a bit like her husband."

"I don't think that he would send anything to me like that," she continued. "I fear that he may have mentioned his money to someone in the boat and that he may have been robbed. He was carrying about £500. I do not think that he would carry it in cash. He would probably have a draft on his bank. I have written to his bank, but they have had nothing through yet."

Mrs. Taylor added that her husband had been seriously ill with malaria and that he was returning from Malaya on the advice of his doctors.

"I am sure," she concluded, "that my husband is not acting in this way of his own accord. He is either going so under pressure, or someone is masquerading as him."

What Really Happened.

Thursday morning's papers reported the mystery to be still unsolved, but by evening the truth was revealed.

All the time that Scotland Yard and his wife were scouring London for him, Mr. Taylor was lying ill in apartments in St. George's Road, near Victoria Station.

It seems that on the voyage home from Malaya Mr. Taylor met and became friendly with another rubber planter, Mr. A. Arnold. Mr. Taylor was suffering from a bout of malaria when they landed together in London and on reaching Victoria he fell ill to continue his journey to Brighton. Mr. Arnold took him to some rooms where he himself was staying and dispatched to Mrs. Taylor a telegram to which reference is made above.

He was under the impression that Mr. Taylor was following up the telegram with a letter to his wife, but Mr. Taylor was too ill to remember to do this, and hence the misunderstanding arose. It was only when Mr. Arnold saw in his newspaper the headlines "Mystery of a Missing Planter—Vanished in London after Landing from Liner" that he realised what had happened.

A Slender Clue.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Taylor, still believing that her husband had met with foul play, was pursuing clues in the West End. She learned that Mr. Taylor had called for letters at the Royal Empire Society's rooms in Northumberland Avenue on Monday and that two other letters were lying there for him.

She was dumbfounded. Before sailing her husband had sent her a letter written in most affectionate terms. He had said he was dying to be home for Christmas; he had also cabled "fond love."

Mrs. Taylor sat down, and added another to the waiting letters—a letter imploring Mr. Taylor to come home.

This was the situation when it was brought to Mrs. Taylor's notice that a bronzed man who said that he was a planter from the East had been seen in a hostelry near Euston Square. The description given of him tallied exactly with that of Mr. Taylor.

On hearing of this, Mrs. Taylor hurried to the Euston Square district, sought help there, and within an hour and a half had found her husband's address—only to find her husband had left.

But Mr. Arnold was able to tell her something of what had happened, and that Mr. Taylor was at Kensington. Half an hour later husband and wife met in Kensington at the house of Mr. Phillips, an ex-rubber planter, who was some years ago one of Mr. Taylor's assistants.

"My Memory Crashed."

"My memory must have crashed," said Mr. Taylor when he gave me his account of the affair. "I have had a nervous breakdown. I remember getting off the boat and going along with Arnold. I had a telegram saying my wife could not come to the docks, so I went to Victoria with Arnold, and that day I felt too queer to go on to Brighton."

"I said to Arnold, 'I will stay a night with friends in London.' He said, 'Come to my diggings; there is a room vacant next to mine,' so I just popped along with him for the night, and got him to send a telegram saying I was detained."

"I have been indoors doping myself with quinine and aspirins nearly all the time since."

"I thought I had written to my wife, but there my memory seems to have failed again."

"Soaked With Malaria."

"I have been in a very nervous state for some time, and that is the reason I have come home. I was wandering round the estate one day and lost myself. I could not remember anything. The doctor ordered me to be sent home at only three days' notice."

"I have been for 21 years rubber planting in the East, and I am just soaked with malaria. This time my mind seems to have gone blank."

"When Arnold showed me a newspaper which stated that I was being looked for, things all came back to me. I rang up Phillips, the only friend in London I could remember, and he came and fetched me out of bed and took me to his house in Kensington."

"I am beginning to remember things better again now, but I still do not feel very grand, and I am heartily thankful that I am never going back to the estate."

YESTERDAY'S TRAINING GALLOPS.

MR. SOARES' FLYING TOURIST DOES IMPRESSIVE GALLOP: GOLD MINE
AND PUNCH GO WELL.

KOH-I-NOOR DOES A MILE IN 2 MINUTES 5 SECONDS.

[By "MORNING DEW"]

The training at Happy Valley yesterday did not bring forth any sensational gallops, but the performance of Mr. A. M. L. Soares' Flying Tourist, a Derby Griffin, which was sent over a mile gallop, was quite impressive. The animal, a flea-bitten grey, looks a likely customer for the forthcoming Derby and will probably be Mr. Noode's mount.
Liberty Bay was not galloped yesterday and rumour has it that the pony is a bit "short" at the moment. It is to be hoped that he will be fit and well before the Annual Meeting.

Punch and Gold Mine went together over a mile, covering the distance in 2 minutes 14 seconds.
This pair look very promising, but one can hardly believe they are likely to extend candidates like Liberty Bay and Trentbridge. Ton-time, a dun pony belonging to Mr.

Lewis, has been performing consistently well of late, and if the pony keeps on improving, he will be a contender worth watching in the shorter races.

The subs were all sent over slow
work and probably some fast times
will be seen on Saturday morning.

The Australian ponies time yesterday include Koh-I-Noor, which did a very useful mile in 2 minutes
5 seconds. Taking only 31 seconds over the first quarter, the pony went on to do the second quarter in 31.2 seconds. The third quarter was faster, only 30 seconds being taken for the journey. The full distance, as stated, took 2.05, which is a very good performance indeed, although the pony appeared all out at the end of the mile.

The Baron did a very smart mile and a quarter in 2.40, taking only 2.05 for the last mile. His finish was quite good and he gave the impression that he could have made the last quarter even faster had he been allowed to do so. The Baron is a brown of 14 hands 2 inches and should be a good candidate to watch
in the Maidens for Australian ponies.

The full list of ponies "clocked"
yesterday was as follows:—

AMUNDSEN QUARREL MAY END.

SCOTT--AND THE ENGLISH.

BID AFTER HIS DEATH TO HEAL A BREACH.

Efforts are being made to obliterate an unhappy episode which caused the late Capt. Amundsen, the famous Polar explorer, to resign his membership of the Royal Geographical Society.

The incident occurred not long before Capt. Amundsen met his death in a gallant effort to rescue the Italian General Nobile, who tried with a party to fly over the North Pole in a dirigible.

The explorer complained that he was "grossly insulted" by the late Lord Curzon when the Royal Geographical Society entertained Amundsen at dinner.

The complaint was made in an article in illustration of Amundsen's assertion that "by and large, the British are a race of bad losers."

But the explorer added a tribute to Capt. Scott. "Nobody," he said, "could hold a higher admiration than myself for the gallant courage of our brave English competitors. Scott was a splendid sportsman as well as a great explorer." The Royal Geographical Association repudiated the suggestion made against Lord Curzon, but Amundsen declined to withdraw his statement, and his resignation from the society followed.

Appeal to the Society.

Now Mr. J. Howard Whitehouse, chairman of the committee for the preservation of the Fram as a memorial to Dr. Nansen, the explorer, has written to Admiral Sir William Goodenough, president of the Royal Geographical Society, asking if the Council will "reconsider the action they took ending Captain Amundsen's connection with the Society."

The matter is under the consideration of the Council.

What Nansen Said.

Mr. Whitehouse adds: "We do not suggest one word of criticism of your Council for the action taken in the difficult situation which arose, nor do we suggest that it may not have been justified."

"I had the privilege of discussing this question with Dr. Nansen shortly before his death, and he expressed to me his earnest hope that a favourable opportunity would be taken by the Royal Geographical Society to heal the breach."

GENESIS A SIDE SHOW.

EPSTEIN MAKES A PROTEST.

Genesis, the much-criticized sculpture by Epstein, is once again the centre of a storm.

This time it is the sculptor himself who raises a protest, not against Genesis, but against "the exhibition of my marble statue as a side-show in a trade exhibition."

Mr. Epstein's complaint is made in a letter to a news agency, and the claims: "It should be obvious to people of any sensibility that a work shown in this manner is disgraceful."

For Charity.

Genesis is on view at the Exhibition of West Bromwich Tradesmen's Association at the Town Hall.

Hall, West Bromwich, and is shown as a separate exhibit for the benefit of the local hospital.

The owner of the statue is Mrs. A. C. Eccles, who has permitted it to be exhibited in numerous cities for the purpose of raising charity.

Mr. Bosson, who is M.P. for Maidstone, stated that he received a letter from Mr. Epstein, telegraphed an inquiry to the exhibition and received a reply stating that Genesis was not with the trade exhibits, but was being shown separately for the hospital funds.

"Disgusted."

When Mr. Epstein heard this explanation he said:

"I have received first-hand information that the statue forms part of what is called a modern bungalow. I am disgusted."

An official of West Bromwich Corporation said the Council had nothing to do with the exhibition.

"I agree," he said, "that the statue is shown in a very unsuitable manner. Many people have simply looked at it and laughed. They think it is an amusing side show."

RIVER CRAFT MAY BE

TOTAL LOSS.

S.S. PITCOCHIE IN BAD SPOT

ON UPPER YANGTZE

Due to the depth of the water and the dangerous position in which the lies, the 400-ton steamer

Pitochien, which was wrecked in the

Kungling Rapids on the upper Yangtze River last week,

may prove to be a total loss.

At the present time the vessel,

which is well known to Yangtze

travellers, is almost entirely submerged, the report received here

states, only her funnel and masts

being visible, despite the general

low water condition that prevails

elsewhere. This latter factor also is said to make it impossible for local salvage craft, which are of deeper draught than the regular

river steamers, to reach the scene of the accident.

The Pitochien, which is owned by

Captain W. G. Pitcairn of the

Haiang Chi Company at Ichang,

one of the best known shipping men

on the upper river, was proceeding

from Ichang to Chungking when she was lost in the Kungling

Rapids, long dreaded by ship masters as one of the most dangerous

spots on the entire Yangtze.
